MOSCOW IS READY FOR NEW STATE AS BUFFER

Krasnochekoff Assumes Leadership In Move For Reform

JAPAN'S VIEW

Militarists Attitude In Siberia Criticised By Newspaper

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, September 15.—According to reliable information the Moscow Soviets have definitely made up their mind to permit the formation of an independent, democratic buffer State in the Far East. M. Krasnochekoff, the Verdhne-Udinsk Foreign Minister, has therefore assumed the leading position in the State, instead of M. Czervonej, whom Moscow has recalled.

A telegram from Chita states that the Assembly has elected a Cabinet from the Cadet and Socialist parties. The Communists do not wish to be included as they fear Ataman Semenoff, who still holds the military power.

JAPANESE VIEW

Osaka, Sept. 16.—The Osaka Asahi, commenting on the report that the government will shortly announce the further withdrawal of garrisons from the Habarovsk region, says: "If the report is true it is a further triumph of public opinion. The government had already decided upon a policy of withdrawing troops from Siberia, therefore the Militarists must abide by that policy. Since the Spring of this year the Militarists have been obliged to withdraw troops from the Amur Railway region and from Zabaikal."

The paper declares that the Militarists have already done irreparable damage against the nation in Siberia. The Asahi is a staunch opponent of the Siberian expedition, and has always urged its withdrawal. Other Osaka papers have also vigorously censured the military activities in Siberia. In fact, the public at large never approved the militaristic program in Siberia.

OPPOSITION ACTIVE

As a matter of fact, the enlightened progressive, democratic section of the people, including practically the whole of "Young Japan," is diametrically opposed to Militarist power, but, as Professor Yoshino recently pointed out in the columns of the Asahi, the Japanese constitution permits the Militarists to exercise practically a free hand, uncontrolled by either Parliament or the Cabinet.

DESCHANEL MAY RESIGN FRENCH PRESIDENCY

M. Millerand Is Mentioned As Most Likely Successor

The Figaro says the name of M. Millerand is prominently mentioned in this connection.

Bark, Thistles, Burrs And Leaves Used For Food In North China

Desolation And Disease Ravage Famine-Stricken Towns And Villages, Says Eye-Witness Who Investigates But Small Region In Chihli

Below is a vivid description of the famine conditions in one part of Chihli, one of the three provinces which are suffering from the historic catastrophe. It is written by Mr. H. W. Robinson, instructor of the Tung Jen School in Paotingfu. Graphic as it is, the story of Mr. Robinson, it must remembered, shows only the conditions of a faction of the suffering millions in the three provinces.

BY H. W. ROBINSON

I have just returned from a five-day trip in the country southwest of Pactingfu, taken for the purpose of observing crop conditions, and am glad to report what I observed to those who are interested in order that this tremendous call for relief work in North China may be undertaken with as broad and intimate understanding of the whole situation as possible. I travelled by train from Pactingfu to Kao-I-Hsin, a distance of about 100 li. Along the railroad crops get better as you go south from Paotingfu, mainly because more animal-turned pumps are used in the southern region. Where these pumps are used there is no famine in that immediate region. However the regions using such pumps are quite limited and in other places the crops will vary from a poor yield to nothing at all.

10,000 STARVING

In the vicinity of Kao-I I spent three days, visiting the hsien offical and getting what information I could from him. He told me that in his hsien, which is small as compared to many others, there are 60,000 people, 10,000 of whom already have no food except as they can gather weeds and leaves. Only three-fifths of the land in this hsien is producing any crops and this has required constant irrigation since the grain was planted last spring so it has been an expensive and laborious summer for those who have any crops to be harvested. This official said he has investigated conditions in his hsien and already has organised relief work. Those who have been found in actual need have been given tickets which enable them to purchase grain at cost price which has been shipped in from other sections. Of course this helps those who are able to pay for grain but it offers no relief for those who need help most, the ones with neither food nor money with which to purchase it. The official stated that it took capital to purchase this grain and he had only a very limited sum to be used for this purpose.

PRICES SKY HIGH

Millet is selling for 14 coppers a catty and other grains correspondingly high. Consequently farmers are already harvesting their millet though the leaves are still green. They also feel safer with their grain in their yards when there are so many hungry people about. Beef is selling for about half as such per catty as millet and I heard of one place where an animal was killed and sold for three coppers a catty. I rode around a good bit in this hsien and should say that the reports of the official were not exaggerated. I did not personally visit the hsien bordering Kao-I on the north and east but was told that conditions there were about the same as in Kao-I. Father to the east, I was told, conditions are much worse and a few days ago about one hundred passed through Kao-I from this region to the east looking for food. The conditions in Kao-I were not tempting to them and they passed on towards Shansi.

DESOLATION EVERYWHERE

From Kao-I I went into Lin Ch'eng hsien where I was told there was great desolation. This hsien is in the foothills of Shansi and as soon as we got up where the land can not be watered from wells we found no crops at all that will yield any harvest. There has been no rain or snow for over a year except once in the spring. This tempted the farmers to plant in some places but they would have been better off had they not, for they will not get back the seed that they put into the ground. I traveled about 80 li in this hsien and nowhere as far as the eye could see in all directions was there any thing growing in the fields that can keep the people alive this winter. No one was working in the fields and almost no one traveling on the roads. The people have either already left or are sitting around in the villages as though they were conserving energy as much as possible. Even the overpresent manure gatherer has given up his job for if the fields won't produce what is the need of fertiliser?

NO GRAINS TO EAT

I spent about two and a half hours in one village looking around and talking with the inhabitants. I have no doubt the sights I saw and the tales I heard could be duplicated in many other villages if one took time to investigate. A hundred families in this village of Tung Tu have no grain to eat. They are gathering "chi li" which is a vine that grows by the side of the road and is the bane of barefoot boys and bicyclists for it bears a burr with sharp thorns for a seed pod. These burrs are selling for thirty coppers a catty and are ground with chaff, which means the seeds from the weeds that grew in last year's grain, or with cotton seed, and made into a cake which is then steamed in Chinese fashion. Elm bark is sometimes mixed with these ingredients so as to hold it together.

THISTLES FOR FOOD

When I was a boy on the farm I wondered that cattle would eat thistles and seem to relish them. Little did I think then I would ever see people eating them but that is what they are doing in Tung Tu. Thistles and leaves are their chief vegetables. Fuel, of

Exclude Jap Immigrants Demand Of U.S. Veterans

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, September 15.—The exclusion of all Japanese immigration was urged in a resolution adopted unanimously by the Veterans of Foreign Wars at their annual encampment.

A further resolution urged the abrogation of the "Gentlemen's agreement" with Japan, and the amendment of the Federal Constitution so as to make children born in the United States eligible for citizenship only if both parents are eligible.

Commander J. W. Jones, of Portland, Oregon, in introducing the latter resolution, declared that Japanese immigration was a question of national scope, and was not confined to the Pacific coast.

ACUTE SITUATION

He said the Japanese question was a source of acute and constantly-increasing irritation, and in time it could not fail to end in grave international friction unless vigorous steps were taken to allay it.

He acknowledged the virtues, thrift and industry of the Japanese race, but contended that if the Japanese were not assimilable, those virtues, instead of being contributory to the national character, were a weapon against it.

Tokio, September 16.—The Chugai Shogyo, one of the leading Tokio newspapers, quotes statements made by Foreign Office and Home Office officials with regard to a plan to unite the efforts of the two departments to promote Japanese emigration to Brazil in view of the barriers raised against it in Canada, the United States and Australasia.

STATUS OF BRAZIL

One official states that Brazil is anxious for immigrants and is offering 1,000 Yen for each family of three members and over. In spite of this the Japanese Government has up to the present made no effort to assist emigration to Brazil.

The authorities have now decided to bring into force emigration regulations, which will afford conveniences and facilities for emigrants to Brazil, including emigration hotels at points of departure and assistance in reaching South America.

It is estimated that the scheme will cost Yen 3,250,000.

The selection of proper emigrants will be undertaken by the authorities in order not to flood Brazil with any one class of emigrant. The present figures of emigration to South America are between 3,000 and 4,000 a year while, it is stated, Brazil is able to absorb at least ten times as many immigrants.

SOVIET FAILS TO PERSUADE UKRANIANS TO QUIT WRANGEL

Moscow Government Fears That Odessa Will Be Taken By Peasants

BOLSHEVIKI IN PLOT

Attempt To Involve Forces Of Lithuanians Seen In Movement

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 14.—Particular interest attaches to a telegram from Warsaw, which has been communicated to Reuter, dealing with the military probabilities of the near future, in view of the reported intended new Bolshevik offensive against Poland on both extreme wings.

CLEANING LINE

According to this message, the period of large operations on the Polish front may be considered as virtually terminated. No sudden changes in the situation on the Polish-Bolshevik front are to be expected. The sole object of Polish movements is the clearing of the Grodno-Brest-Litovsk line from Bolshevik bands, and the freeing of Eastern Galicia.

The Bolsheviki in the north are alleged to be actively working to provoke a conflict between the Lithuanian and Polish troops. The success of such intrigue would be to give the Soviet a considerable military advantage.

The Moscow Government recognises the risk of Odessa falling into the hands of the Ukrainian peasants, who have risen in revolt, and threaten the Soviet rear.

The Soviet has, consequently, tried to win over the Ukrainian Chief, Machno, but the latter has rejected its overtures, and remains faithful to his treaty with General Wrangel.

MOVE IS BLOCKED

General Wrangel is negotiating with Ataman Petlura with a view to common action against the Bolsheviks. One of Petura's conditions of acceptance is the recognition of the independence of the Ukraine, with all its attributes.

Warsaw, September 14.—The Lithuanians and Poles are again engaged in hostilities in the Suwalki sector, near the German border.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 14.—The Board of Directors of the Daily Herald today declined the offer of £75,000 from the Russian "Third Internationale," and accepted the resignation from the Board of Mr. Meynell, who negotiated the offer.

The other directors adopted a resolution declaring that they had no knowledge of the offer, and expressing confidence that the Labor movement in England will meet the journal's financial requirements.

Milner's Resignation Report Is Denied

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 15.—The Morning Post states on high authority that the reported pending resignation of Lord Milner is absolutely without foundation.

Since the armistice he has been, and is now, closely engaged on a number of questions of momentous interest to the Dominions and Colonies, and also to the Empire as a whole, and he hopes to carry these questions ultimately to a settlement. He is now in the best of health, and present obligations compel him to remain in office during one of the gravest periods in the nation's affairs, adds the Morning Post.

Senator Declares Cox Would Scrap Polices Fostered By Washington

(Reuter's Service)

Marion, Sept. 15.—Replying to Governor Cox's "Senate oligarchy" charges, Senator Harding declared that the Californians had no complaints as to the exercise of Congressional power, except those who wanted a perpetual aristocracy and personal government.

Governor Stephens, of California, after a long conference with Senator Harding on the California race question, made the statement that California would go to the Republicans by a majority of a hundred thousand.

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 15.—Senator Borah, in the course of a speech at Governor Cox's home while Governor Cox was speaking at Senator Borah's home, asserted that Governor Cox would, if elected, scrap the policies of Washington and Monroe. He declared that the issue between Cox and Harding was clear-cut.

He asserted that the standard of the League of Nations was all wrong, and said people were unable to accept. He favored a provision in the Constitution that the United States should enter no war, except one of absolute defense against invasion and attack

Italian Premier Thanks Millerand

Paris, September 15.—The Italian Prime Minister, on crossing back into Italy after the Aix-les-Bains Conference, addressed a telegram of thanks to M. Millerand. The French Premier, in reply, expressed his gratification that their meeting had served to draw tighter the bonds uniting the two Latin peoples.

MAINE WILL GO REPUBLICAN, IS LATE PREDICTION

(Reuter's Service)

Portland, Maine, September 14.—Polling in the Maine elections for the State Governorship and other offices is now going on. The latest returns show that all Republican candidates for Congress will probably be elected by overwhelming majorities, and that the State Legislature will also be strongly Republican.

Women have everywhere availed themselves of the vote, and mainly voted for the Republican candidates. The special interest taken in America in these elections is due to the tradition that the polling in Maine is usually indicative of the feeling of the whole country.

Later.—The decisive character of the Republican victory is now clearly demonstrated, and, in fact, the party's majority is far the largest it has ever secured in Maine.

The poll is unprecedently heavy owing to the participation of women. The League of Nations question was the prominent issue.

DENIAL GIVEN AT PEKING TO ARMS SALES STORIES

Reuter Statement Based Upon Interview Contradicts Tuchun's Charges

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 16.—Reuter's representative today interviewed the Italian Minister, with reference to the recent rumors of alleged contraband of arms by Italian men-of-war at Shanghai, which investigation proved to be false, the so-called men-of-war in reality being two submarine chasers, which for nearly a year have been moored in the Soochow creek, and the arms consisting merely of small arms belonging to these vessels, and with reference more especially to the notice published in some daily papers stating that the Chinese government had protested to the Italian Legation.

He was officially informed by Marquis Durazzo, who has just returned to Peking, that not only has the Italian Legation received no protest but Marquis Durazzo himself has made representations to the Waichiaopu in order to stop these rumors, which have no foundation whatsoever.

The foregoing despatch is in direct contradiction of charges made in a statement issued by Tuchun Lu Yung-hsiang of Chekiang contained in a telegraphed complaint

KUNGPING AND BRITISH SHIP IN COLLISION

Both Damaged As Chinese Vessel Was Carried Up Stream By Tide

Swung round by the tide of the Whangpoo just above the Public Gardens, the China Merchants' steamer Kungping, home bound from Chefoo and Newchwang, collided with the British gunboat Mantis yesterday afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock.

A big hole was made in the bow of the British vessel, while the upper structure and the stem of the Kungping were damaged. The passengers on the Chinese steamer remained calm.

The Kungping was proceeding southward to the King Lee Yuan Wharf where she was to be docked. The force of the tide swung her round and washed her up river in a parallel position.

When she was carried to the senior British Naval Buoy, where the gunboat was anchored, she collided with it.

The Kungping was under the command of Captain Shepherd. After the accident, she proceeded up river to the Kiangnan Dock where she will undergo repairs. While the gunboat was towed shortly after 3 o'clock to the dock by a tug.

The exact amount of damage to both ships could not be ascertained yesterday. The Kungping is expected to resume her sailings shortly.

New York Chamber Head Changes View On Japan

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Osaka, September 16.—Mr. Darwin P. Kingsley, President of the New York Chamber of Commerce, who visited Japan last May with the Vanderlip party, contributes a long article to the Osaka Mainichi today. Mr. Kingsley says that his attitude, when speaking at San Francisco after the tour, differed from his convictions when he delivered his speech at Osaka on May 10 and explains why.

"I said at Osaka," Mr. Kingsley writes, "that I believed that Japan would do justice in Shantung and that she would not follow a militaristic policy in Manchuria, Siberia and China. My visit to the other side of the Yellow Sea compelled me to modify my opinion or at least to suspend judgment. I have never been able to understand how Japan by the military conquest of Kiaochao got any better title to economic rights and privileges than she did to the sovereignty of that section.

EXPRESS DOUBTS

"We were told while in Japan that she would ultimately restore territorial sovereignty to China but emphasis was always laid on the word, 'territorial.' It was always said that economic rights and concessions must be discussed with China. I have never been able therefore to arrive at a clear conclusion as to just what Japan intended to do. Having looked at the problem from the viewpoint of China and having felt Chinese reaction, I am now more than puzzled. Frankly I am in doubt whether Japan will ultimately do what seems to me justice in Shantung.

QUESTIONS POLICY

"I am also in doubt as to whether or not Japan will follow a militaristic policy in China, Monogolia, Manchuria and Siberia. She is certainly following that policy now. It has already cost her a great deal. It has cost her the friendship of every American and Englishman I met anywhere west of the Yellow Sea and brought her the implacable hatred of all Chinese. Against my natural feeling and preconceptions I was finally obliged to conclude that the military elements in Japan are still clearly dominant. In other words Japan is still more the Japan of Prince Yamagata than that of Viscount Shibusawa and Viscount Kaneko."

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 14.—Reuter's Agency learns that the Financial Conference, convened by the League of Nations, which is to open in Brussels on Sept. 24, is expected to last a fortnight.

All nations, including the United States, will be represented by three delegates each, Germany, Austria and Bulgaria have been invited to send delegates, but only in a consultative capacity.

Great Britain will be represented by Lord Chalmers (formerly Permanent Secretary of the Treasury), Lord Cunliffe (formerly Governor of the Bank of England), and Mr. Henry Bell (General Manager of Lloyd's Bank). The representatives of India will be: Mr. Henry Fraser Howard (formerly Secretary of the Finance Department), Sir Marshall Frederick Reid (chairman of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce), and Sir Sazilchoy Churrinbhoy (representing the Bombay business community). The Dominions will be represented as follows: Canada, Mr. Hugh Guthrie (Minister of Militia); Australia Mr. J. R. Collins (Permanent Secretary of the Treasury); New Zealand, Colonel Sir James Allen (Minister of External Affairs); and South Africa, Mr. Blankenberg, (Acting High Commissioner).

INTERNATIONAL COURT

London, Sept. 14.—The draft scheme for the institution of a permanent court of International Justice is now published by the League of Nations. The scheme, which appears in a special supplement of the League's official journal, is published bi-lingually, viz., in French and English.

It consists of 56 articles, and has been prepared by an international committee of jurists, who submitted it to the Council of the League of Nations at San Sebastian. It was there decided to ask M. Bourgeois to prepare a report for submission to the next session of the Council in Brussels in October. The Council will then take a definite decision, which in turn will be submitted to the first meeting of the Assembly at Geneva in November.

In a letter, communicating to the governments of states which are members of the League of Nations, the scheme referred to above, the Council of the League emphasises that all members of the Committee of Jurists signed the report.

The Council strongly urges its ratification declaring that failure would be an irreparable international misfortune.

The draft scheme provides that a Judges' Court shall be elected by the Assembly of the League independently from a list of candidates, which will be prepared from 44 national groups of the Permanent Court of Arbitration instituted at the Hague by the Conventions of 1899 and 1907, each group consisting of two candidates. The Courts will be composed of 15 members, elected for nine years.

CONCESSION MADE

A concession is, however, made to international susceptibilities by an article giving each party to a dispute the right to have among the judges dealing with the case one judge of his own nationality, chosen preferably from the list of candidates. The Court must hold a session once each year, and the President is empowered to call extraordinary sessions if required.

On the delicate question of the Court's competence, the project says that when a dispute has arisen between States, and it has been found impossible to settle it by diplomatic means, and no agreement has been made to choose another jurisdiction, the party complaining may bring the case before the Court.

In the case of States which are members of the League, the Court shall have jurisdiction to determine cases of a legal nature concerning the categories of disputes mentioned, in Paragraph Two of Article Thirteen of the Covenant.

The Court shall also take cognisance of all disputes submitted to it by a convention between the parties.

The Hague is proposed as the seat of the Court.

Far East Greatest Foreign Outlet For America—Lamont

(Reuter's Service)

New York, September 15.—Mr. Thomas W. Lamont, addressing the American Manufacturers' Association, said the Far-East bade fair to become the greatest foreign outlet in the world for American manufacturing enterprise, if properly developed by business men. Investors must assist China financially through the Consortium. Siberia needed American machinery and methods.

Japan, he added, was commercially handicapped by the policy of the so-called military party, whose philosophy of force cramped the liberal ideas of Japan's manufacturers, merchants and bankers.

Candidates should be selected by competitive examination, which might be a general examination for all public services, but candidates should be approved as well as examined. The minimum pay should be £600 per annum.

Japanese Cabinet Takes Action To Save Silk Market

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Sept. 15.—The Cabinet has decided to take steps to relieve the silk situation. It is reported that the government is advancing to the syndicate of growers, reefers and exporters a sum of 50,000,000 yen, in addition to the fifteen million yen from the Bank of Japan, with the object of maintaining the price and controlling exports.

The Minister of Agriculture is reported to have said that the object of the loan was to maintain the price of raw silk at yen 1,500 per 100 kin and that it was proposed to reduce the export by half, by restricting production if necessary.

He stated that the stocks of silk in warehouse were so congested that yen 50,000,000 to yen 60,000,000 would be required for relief.

The Minister of Finance is said to have demurred, but the Cabinet approved the plan. Stocks will be taken off the hands of firms in financial difficulties.

COLLEGE MOURNS CHEN YU-PING, CHOLERA VICTIM

Five More Of Teaching Staff, Foreigners, Stricken But Are Recovering

Mr. Chen Yu-ping, assistant professor of Bible, and acting Vice President of Shanghai College, died yesterday morning of cholera. Five others, foreign professors and their families are stricken with the same disease and are being cared for at the isolation hospital, but by latest reports are now on the way to recovery.

All who were taken ill were living in one house, and as the deceased also ate in that house, it seems that the infection was limited to that place. It is not yet definitely known what the cause of the infection was.

DEEP MOURNING

The college is in deep mourning over the death of this beloved professor, in many respects one of the most promising of her own sons. He was graduated only two years ago, but was already trusted with the highest responsibilities and regarded with deep affection by both students and teachers. A memorial service was held yesterday morning, at which varied expression was given to the feelings of those present. The President's address follows.

"This is the greatest sorrow that I have experienced since coming to China," said President White. "More than the sorrow for the death of my own mother, who died during the past year at the age of eighty-four, do I now mourn for Chen, who was just like a son to me. While he may not have been perfect, he was one in ten thousand. He was connected with this institution from the beginning when he first came as a little boy; and when after a few years his father's people, who were not Christians, wanted to induce him to leave the Christians, he chose to remain even at a great sacrifice.

INDEPENDENT SPIRIT

"Chen was a very independent spirit, and rather than receive help from the mission he worked his way through school and college. He intended to go to America next year, and I urged him to take the help that he needed; and he finally agreed to give his life against another man's money, and so to make the most of his own life in service for his country.

"For many years," said Doctor White, "I have cherished the idea of having some day a Chinese as president of this college, and I had thought of Chen Yu-ping as entirely worthy of such a position. There are many others who are as good as he was in intellect and power, but none excelled him in the spirit of consecration to the college and to the kingdom of God."

In The U.S. Court For China

Judge C. S. Lobingier sat in the U. S. Court for China yesterday in the cases of the Yangtsze Transport and Supply Co. vs. Tsu Tsu-wen and the Hea Sun Iron Works vs. the str. Chang Ming.

It was agreed that both cases be taken together, and with Mr. Haskell's consent, Mr. Davies made a slight amendment to his counter claim.

In opening Mr. Haskell said that in November, 1919, the Yangtsze Transport and Supply Co. passed a resolution authorising their compradore, a Mr. Lu, to enter into a contract for the steamer Chang Ming. The compradore negotiated with Mr. Tsu Tsu-wen who is attached to the Ironworks above mentioned.

The agreement was drawn up in Chinese, he said, but the translation had been agreed to by counsel for the other side.

DETAILS OF CLAIM

In November, 1919, the Chang Ming was delivered to the Hea Sun Iron Works under the terms of this contract and work was started on her. The hull was nearly completed and a considerable portion of the ship was constructed, but there was still a lot of work to be done to it. The contractor, he said, went ahead with the work, but at the expiration of three months the work was not going on as it ought to be and demands were made to speed up the vessel or turn it over to the plaintiff. They kept working on the vessel in a rather dilatory manner and finally on May 30 plaintiffs were compelled to take the ship away and move her to the Kiangwan Arsenal dockyards in order to have the vessel completed.

There were two principal questions of fact involved in this case, said Mr. Haskell, (1) whether or not the contractor completed the work in the manner and time specified in the contract, and (2) the question of fact as to the loss of time and the loss of prospective profits.

Captain Eisler was the first witness, and the case was afterwards adjourned.

INTERESTING POINT RAISED

In the U. S. Court for China yesterday, the case was heard of the Doong Nyii Benevolent Association vs. Crew.

Mr. Haskell, appearing for the Association, said the claim was as regards the title to a piece of land registered in the U. S. Consulate in the name of H. S. Groove. Mr. Groove had not been seen or heard of in Shanghai for about 25 years, and in the meantime the Doong Nyii Benevolent Association had been paying the taxes.

After quoting the laws of Alaska, counsel called Yang Tsing-tsu, a Chinese aged 73, who said he had been Chairman of the Association about 20 years. Witness identified the title deed shown to him as the property of the Association.

Witness said he had been familiar with the piece of property described in the title deed for over 50 years, and during that period the Doong Nyii Benevolent Association had been in possession of that property, and had their offices there.

TAXES PAID

Municipal and Government taxes, he said, had been paid by the Association. No person during the past ten years or so had made any claim to the property.

Mr. Haskell said he had no other witnesses.

The Court—Have you not got any tax receipts?

Mr. Haskell—I have one, showing payment to the S.M.C. on April 24, 1919.

The Court said he would like further evidence.

Mr. Haskell—I asked at the Tax Office and they refused assistance. If it is necessary I can have them subpoenaed.

In answer to the Court Mr. Haskell said that the other receipts were held by another person who was not in Shanghai.

The Court—This question has never arisen in this court as far as I know, but it seems to raise (1) whether the Chinese law arises, and if so is it adverse possession. A somewhat similar case had been dealt with by British Judge Bourne in Tientsin.

Mr. Haskell said he would look further into the legal aspect of the case and, if possible, call further evidence.

The case was then adjourned.

MINE OWNERS ARE SCORED BY MEN

Federation Issues Statement Saying Too Much Is Spent On Properties

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 14.—As was to be anticipated, the Miners' Federation has not taken long in challenging the Government's figures in regard to coal production and costs.

The Federation has issued a statement in which it asserts that the costs of production include an abnormal amount spent by the mine-owners on development, and it contends that this expenditure will continue to be high as long as the owners believe that decontrol is approaching, because their profits are guaranteed, regardless of preparatory capital expenditure, which is always counted as an item of legitimate cost under the Coal Mines Act.

The statement attributes the reduction in output during the three months ended June 30 to the usual holidays, and says this does not affect the Federation's annual calculations of surplus. It attributes the reduction of coal exports from which most of the profit is made—to the diversion of export coal to inland use in order to build up an accumulation of coal at home, in view of the possibility of a strike.

The Federation asserts that, with a return to normal conditions in expenditure on development and expenses, there will be sufficient surplus wholly to meet the miners' present demands.

Bark, Thistles, Burrs And Leaves Used For Food In North China

course, is necessary for cooking these simple dishes and some people are tearing down their houses to get what little wood is available. Others are cutting down trees in their yards. People may be able to exist for a month or more on this kind of diet but what are they going to do when they can no longer collect from the fields and roadsides?

Although there would have been no grain to harvest there might have been a bit of fodder for animals had the locusts left it alone. Just oustide of Tung tu village I saw one village of 24 mow which is as barren as though it had been raked with a fine tooth rake and yet I was told that a few weeks ago it was covered with millet which stood about a foot high. The locusts came and stayed until it was all eaten up. I saw other fields where they had stripped off the leaves but this field didn't have even the stalks left. Whilst they were eating, which was for about two weeks, I was told that you couldn't see the ground, and the fertiliser which they left covers the ground now as thick as grain that is sowed broadcast for planting.

About 200 men from the village tried to check the invasion but they could not kill them off as fast as they came, I saw a ditch about a third of a mile long which they tried to use for capturing them but it proved unsuccessful. Those who were able paid poor people to kill them and bought them by the catty. I saw a pile of locusts that had been bought in that way which is being used for pig fodder.

CHOLERA STILL LURKING

Ordinarily these villagers get some income from lime kilns just outside the village but no one is building at present and so there is no sale for lime. Even that which they sold last spring was to be paid for this fall after harvest and of course that cannot be realised. On top of all this disaster cholera is lurking in many of these villages so that people are dying constantly. I was told that in the Lin Ch'eng coal mine 200 miners died of cholera in one day.

Still this is not enough. A band of robbers have been terrorising this region, some of them said to be ex-soldiers in Tuan Ch'i-jui's army. They have kidnapped people and demanded ransoms and in one case where $2,000 was demanded and when only $1,800 was delivered the man was actually put to death. When I heard of all these circumstances it seemed to me that surely "It never rains, but it pours."

NO HARVEST FOR 80,000

I visited the Lin Ch'eng official and asked him how conditions were in the rest of the hsien. He replied that they were alike everywhere. Seventy or eighty thousand people in this hsien and no harvest for them according to his report. When asked what he was doing, or could do he replied "Mei yu fa tsu." He said he didn't even have capital with which to purchase grain from other regions and seemed to have no idea of trying to relieve the conditions all around him.

We passed through one village where there was a fair and this was about the only place where we saw animals. From every direction people were leading them in for sale. To be sure they can get only a few dollars but a few dollars is better than an animal which has to be fed, in spite of the fact that animals will be almost priceless to them in the spring if conditions are so they can till their fields again.

IN SEARCH OF A LIVING

On my return journey all along the way we passed sojourners leaving their native regions in search of food. The Hankow train was so crowded that I could only get on the platform between cars and before we got to Paotingfu even that place was crowded. Five men got on at Shih Chia Chuang without any tickets trying to get to Peking. They managed to stay on till we got to Paotingfu but I saw the police chase them off there. They are but a sample of thousands who are leaving their homes in search of a living.

But why rehearse all this. We all know that we are in the midst of a famine stricken region. The question we are concerned about is what can be done?

I am glad to learn that steps are being taken in Peking and Tientsin to form some sort of organisation for undertaking this work. Such organisations will undoubtedly have plans better than any I can offer but I venture to make a few suggestions that have come to me as I have been thinking of this work. Isn't there some public work where thousand of men can be employed and paid enough to keep themselves and their families alive? Certainly grain can be bought from other regions and shipped to these desolate places, and sold at cost to those who can pay for it. Local industrial work can be started in some places where men can earn their livelihood. One young man in Tung Tu told me that if he had a few hundred dollars to buy cotton with he could give work to a hundred women in his village so they could earn their living. Of course a market would have to be found for cloth which they could make but isn't that where Chambers of Commerce and such organisations can help?

NEED MARKET FOR LIME

If a market for lime can be found the people in Tung Tu can also get some income from this business. The railroads ought to give free transportation for grain shipped to these regions and for shipment of any articles produced by these people for marketing. Cannot a limited number of men be used to dig wells? These wells have been the salvation of those who have them this year and doubtlessly would be of great value in the future I know of one hsien official who had it in his mind to help the people in hsien put in animal-turned wells early in the spring. This may be beyond the realm of possibility but if fodder can be shipped into these regions to keep their animals through the winter they will be invaluable in the spring. If rain should come so they can plant winter wheat they will need seed grain immediately.

Denial Given To Arms Sales Stories

addressed to the Diplomatic Corps at Peking. Tuchun Lu alleged that with the knowledge of the Municipal authorities he set confidential agents to work in Shanghai who were able to arrange for sales of arms, which his message set forth were stored aboard Italian warships stationed here. These charges have been denied by Italian consular officers here and although the Peking despatch says that reports of contraband arms have proved to be unfounded, no official notice has been issued here concerning any investigation which, the despatch intimates, has been made.

The Chinese Recorder

The September number of the Chinese recorder, published monthly by the American Presbyterian Mission Press, is remarkable for the unusual number of short pithy articles, containing much food for thought within a small space. Thus Prof. T. C. Chao translates the statement of aims which has been put forth by the body of young Chinese Christians called the Peking Apologetic Group, and a letter in reply to the recently translated article by Mr. Chen Tu-hsieu, published in La Jeunesse. A perusal of these translations will furnish much information as to the mind of the young progressives among the Chinese Christians.

Mr. F. W. S. O'Neill provides a very readable article on "What Are We to Read," with characterisations of many good books, especially those in the Home University Library. Mr. H. Davies describes carefully the actual progress that has been made within the last year in church union in Kwantung; we note with pleasure that the churches of seven different denominations have united, and that their combined membership is over 19,000; surely a promising start.

The remaining articles, most of them longer, are not less useful. Mr. Burgess calls for a Christian program for the present crisis in China; after analysing recent events under seven heads (and we have yet to see a more complete or striking statement of the facts in such small compass) there is a call to the Christian community in China to use the "opportunity of service of unprecedented magnitude;" and the particulars of the service are described in a fashion quite as clear as was the original analysis of the situation.

It is a healthy sign to find doctors writing for the Recorder; it proves at least that they understand that they must come into the general missionary forum if they are to influence the whole body of missionaries. Dr. Lennox has some startling revelations to make about the waste of missionary lives, and the ease with which it might be avoided. Three readily understood diagrams demonstrate the waste, both in men and money, and the whole article is instinct with practical wisdom that ought to be of a primary character for most residents in China, instead of needing to be drilled into us all.

Mr. A. G. Adams describes most happily how he made his hobby of photography an assistance to his work of preaching the Gospel, and the pictures which are reproduced to accompany the article are excellently done, and indicate much more than the careful technician.

Mr. Waidtlow continues his comparison of the ancient religions of China and Scandanavia. In these articles there is much suggestive material, but not enough proof. We are inclined to think that the writer is jumping over too wide a chasm. There is always left the possibility that a more detailed statement would provide the proofs that are lacking, and in any case much of the main contention is stimulating to the student of comparative religions.

The Frawley Company

"TURN TO THE RIGHT"

T. Daniel Frawley is a keen judge of his public. Knowing full well that Shanghai is not a city overwhelmed with moral darkness—as garrulous and unseeing globe-trotters often describe it, but on the contrary is keenly appreciative of clean, wholesome drama and comedy, he confidently presented to the judgment of the large audience at the Lyceum theater last night, that sparkling, delightful comedy, "Turn to the Right."

There are three crooks—needless to say, they reform—a sweet woman, with three pretty girl friends; there are marriage bells galore; there are sobs, thrills and excitement—an altogether delightful play, as well acted as its theme is charming.

Miss Leslie Virden took the part of Mrs. Bascom, and her rendering of the character was masterly—no wonder the crooks succumbed to her influence. Miss Claribel Fontaine was delightful, as usual, in her ingenue part (Betty Bascom). The Misses Gloria Fonda and Olive Stevens provided good support.

The three hardened crooks were portrayed by Albert Morrison, Charles Osborne and Mr. Frawley—need we say more? W. Messenger Bellis gave a clever portrayal of Deacon Tillenger, which scored a big success. Smaller parts were capably taken by Taylor Graves and Gorden Blyth.

Verdict—One of the greatest Frawley successes.

Tonight—"Paid in Full."

Decide to be Strong

Don't surrender to a constant half-sick and half-well condition. Don't let indifferent health hold you back.

Lassitude, indifferent appetite, unrefreshing sleep, an "always-tired" feeling—these are some of the symptoms of a poison-clogged body due to blood poverty—anemia.

Vigoron rebuilds the health and restores vigor by enriching the blood with iron and with millions of powerful red blood cells. Blood like this cleans out the poisons that have enervated you; then comes the natural return of good health.

HUPEH'S ANFUITE CIVIL GOVERNOR IS DISMISSED

Is Given Advisorship By Tuchun Wang At Salary Of $600 Per Month

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, September 5.—Since the fall of the Anfu Club, several officials in this province have been dischagred. The latest one dismissed by a Presidential mandate is the Civil Governor of Hupeh, Mr. Ho Pei-yung.

After the downfall of Anfu force in North China, General Tsao Kun, Military Governor of Chihli and one of the leaders of the Anti-Anfu forces, ordered General Wang Chuan-yuan to institute an investigation into the activities of Civil Governor Ho Pei-yung, a member of the Anfu Club.

General Wang, being a good friend of Mr. Ho Pei-yung, replied to General Tsao Kun speaking highly of Ho's conduct. Afterward General Tsao sent another telegram to Tuchun Wang deluging him with a host of questions regarding Ho Pei-yung's association with the Anfu Club. Seeing that there was no hope to further recommend Mr. Ho, Tuchun Wang showed the telegram of General Tsao to Mr. Ho, who thereby tendered his resignation to Peking. General Tsao Kun and other Chihli commanders were only too glad to accept his resignation, and thus the Civil Governorship of Hupeh was taken from the hands of an Anfu man.

SUCCESSOR CHOSEN

The successor to Mr. Ho Pei-yung as Civil Governor is Mr. Sung Chen-chia, taoyin of Ichang and Shasi and a native of Shantung province. Mr. Sung arrived at Wuchang to assume his new post on September 3, when he was welcomed to the city by all high officials in Wuchang and Hankow.

Since the appointment of Mr. Sung to the governorship there has been protest from the Hupeh gentry in Peking, who telegraphed to the Hupeh Provincial Assembly and other organisations not to accept Mr. Sung as their Civil Governor. But the principal source of protest is from those officials in Peking who failed to compete with Sung in getting the post.

The disposal of ex-Civil Governor Ho Pei-yung is uncertain. He has been called to Peking for a new appointment, but whether he will go is not known. It is understood that General Wang Chuan-yuan, being in sympathy with the discharged Anfu governor, has the intention to invite Mr. Ho as his special advisor at a salary of $600 per month.

Owing to the unfavorable attitude of the authorities here toward the People's Constitutional Convention proposed by General Wu Pei-fu, there has been little if any discussion by people here concerning this problem. Many organisations in Wuchang and Hankow would have taken up vigorous discussion of it long ago had it not been for the fact that Tuchun Wang Chuan-yuan would not allow it unless he had been so instructed by Peking government. At the beginning Tuchun Wang issued orders prohibiting any meeting to be held to discuss this matter.

CAMPAIGN STARTED

Only very recently, the Union of Associated Bodies of Hupeh and the Wuhan Students Union took the initiative and launched a campaign to enlist the support of all important organisations in Wuchang, Hankow and Hanyang in speeding up the convention. Several meetings have been held in Hankow at which representatives of the above two organisations discussed the advisability of initiating a provincial organisation in the province in preparation for the national convention.

On September 4, a circular letter was sent out by the Preparation Committee of the People's Convention to the various Chinese organisations urging them to send representatives, from one to three for each organisation, to a special meeting to be held on September 12 at the Hsiao Kwan Ti Temple of Hankow. It is expected that a large number of representatives will attend the proposed meeting.

In addition to holding meetings, a delegate was sent to Paotingfu to interview with General Wu Pei-fu, China's man of the hour, to discuss methods of organising deleration and program of procedure.

OPEN MINES

Perhaps the most important enterprise yet entered into by the provincial government of Hupeh this year is the formal opening of the Hsiang-pei-shap Mines by the Hupeh Mining Bureau on September 3. The Mines are situated at Hsiang-pei Mountains near Huang-shih-kong, a port of call on the Yangtsze River not far from Hankow. The opening ceremony was attended by a representative gathering of officials and prominent industrial leaders in these cities, besides a party of members of the Provincial Assembly of Wuchang. The Hsiang-pei-shan Mines are equipped with modern mining devises, and the most noteworthy of them is a Transportation Railway connecting the mines with Huang-shih-kong, and thus with the Yangtsze River.

CHANG CHIN-YAO'S FORCES PLAYING HAVOC IN ANHUI

Demand $30,000 From One City; Crops Good But Prices High

(China Press Correspondence)

Hwaiyuan, September 10.—Conditions in the interior of Anhui are very upset. The retreating troops of Chang Ching-yao, the ex-tuchun of Hunan have entered the province of Anhui and are leaving desolation and ruin in their path. They passed through the city of Luanchou and came on toward Shouchou. They demanded $30,000 from the city of Shouchou, but at present neither has the money been given nor have the robbers entered the city.

The country outside the cities is being pillaged in true robber style. No man's life, money or wife is safe while these men are at large. That their force is strong is evidenced by the fact that they have been able to put in retreat the soldiers sent out against them.

The crops have been the best in years. What is very apt to be a famine stricken region has had a bumper harvest in everything. The wheat and the barley were the best in years. The kaoliang followed along in like manner. The beans were unusually fine. The rains came just at the right time and permitted the farmers to get in their rice.

It is an unknown thing to have a bumper harvest in both rice and wheat the same year, and yet that is just what happened this year. And now the sesame is higher than a man's head. With famine conditions prevailing in five provinces and with good railroad connections, it is not strange that famine prices are also prevailing here. Prices are higher than they were in the big famine some eight or nine years ago. The result is a happy farmer but a sad salaried man.

The schools are crowded to their utmost capacity and beyond.

AGE HANDICAP TOO HEAVY FOR TOMMY BURNS

Story Is Told Of His Plucky Effort Against Youthful Joe Beckett

WEAKENS IN SIXTH ROUND

Victor Given Little Credit After Contest Described As Uninspiring

London, July 17.—The bold venture of the Canadian boxer, Tommy Burns, who is 40, to stand up to a much younger opponent in Joe Beckett, aged 27, failed last night at the Royal Albert Hall, Kensington.

Burns started full of vim and vigor and fought sturdily up to the fifth round. But the strength of the youthful Beckett began to tell in the sixth round, and it was quite a weakened and tired Burns when the end came in the seventh. Then his seconds threw in the towel, in token of defeat.

The handicap of "Anno Domini" had then become evident.

THE FIGHT

Burns's seconds threw in the towel for him when it was perfectly clear that his chance was hopeless.

In some ways it was the most uninspiring contest between big men that I have seen for a long time. The winner certainly obtained little credit from it, for he was, by comparison with some of his exhibitions, unusually slow, erratic, and without any great pretence to cleverness.

Nor did he appear to punch with his usual snap and vim, although he damaged Burn's face considerably. He drew blood from Burn's left eye and nearly closed the other.

Burns had far the greater variety of blows, and he quite clearly had Beckett guessing during the greater part of the fight. Beckett seemed to be fully alive to the necessity of very great care, yet his defense was no better than it usually is; indeed, I doubt very much whether he will ever understand or appreciate the value of a sound defense.

Calculating by points, Burns until his age and his absence from the ring for twelve years began to tell, at one time held quite a respectable lead.

He revealed a very dangerous right hook which caused Beckett to crouch unusually low, thereby handicapping his own attacks. Indeed, Beckett missed a whole lot and was nothing like the Beckett we saw against Bombardier Wells.

POOR FOR A CHAMPION

Some people even went so far as to conclude that he was allowing Burns to make a show, but Beckett is not and never can be a man of that sort. He fought his best to win and win quickly, but for a champion it was a poor best at that.

Burns marred some very pretty foot-work, combined with some clever slipping and "ducking," by some flagrant holding. He was apparently determined to take as few of Beckett's rib-benders as he could possibly help, and this caused him to hang on the clinches in a way that once brought a caution from the referee.

On the whole, Burns gave a really sound and tough display for a man who was thirteen years older than his opponent. He could, however, not hit hard enough to hurt Beckett. The Englishman was quite unmarked at the close, and he has evidently hardened himself to take punishment.

Burns must have been greatly pleased with the heartiness of his reception when he entered the ring at 9:40, just after his opponent. Beckett was loudly applauded, but it was something like a roar that greeted the Canadian as he stepped through the ropes. Burns is undoubtedly very popular, and he can certainly say that he fulfilled his promise for he gave Beckett quite a hard fight while it lasted.

Each man had a small army of seconds. I counted seven in the Englishman's corner, and among these were Johnny Basham and Jim Driscoll. The veteran Pat O'Keefe, smiling as ever, was one of Burns's assistants. Burns looked very serious, but Beckett's face was twisted in that peculiar way of his which is neither a grin nor a smile.

4 TO 1 AGAINST BURNS

After ten minutes had been consumed in preliminaries the contest opened at 9:52. The odds were then 4 to 1 against Burns, and there was no lack of takers. Several of the veterans of the National Sporting Club backed the Canadian.

They feinted and fiddled about for nearly half a minute before a blow was struck. Then Beckett tried a left and right, but they were curly rather than straight blows and they only glanced across Burns's face. Burns opened his account with a very pretty right hook on the side of Beckett's head, but was immediately cautioned by the referee for hanging on.

Beckett's left leads were exasperatingly short, and he did nothing during the round at all worthy of his reputation. As the gong went Burns made a silent claim for having been hit low, but the referee did not heed his appeal.

Burns was as light on his feet as a kitten, and it was certainly due to his tricky manner of stepping in and out that Beckett was beating the air most of the time. Beckett scored with two or three left hooks, but Burns quickly jumped into a clinch.

Beckett woke up a bit at the opening of the third and he scored on the body, but Burns immediately replied with two beautifully timed short right hooks to the jaw, which caused Beckett to stagger and almost wobble. Again Burns repeated the right hook experiment with success and they were so warmly engaged at the close of the round that neither heard the bell and they had to be separated by the referee, who was Mr. Joe Palmer.

In the fourth our champion was still fighting in a half-hearted way and apparently puzzled. Burns was certainly out-boxing him and was well ahead on balance of such points as had been scored.

Beckett strengthened his attack at the opening of the fifth round, but he still found Burns hard to land on. Burns had quite a rough time of it for nearly a minute, but he weathered the storm and fought back with truly wonderful speed and cleverness.

Burns tried to mix it at the opening of the sixth round, but this is essentially Beckett's best game, and at the end of the round it was clear that Burns was beginning to tire very rapidly.

Beckett loosed all his batteries in the seventh, and hooking and jabbing with something like his real power he soon had Burns down, first for 8 seconds and then for 9.

Burns made a great recovery on each occasion, but his seconds were wise to throw in the towel before the end of the round. Burns was beaten, but not disgraced. Again youth had been served.

BY A MAN OF 40

Many thousands of people paid big sums for a seat in the Albert Hall last night to see it proved conclusively and beyond hope of argument that when it comes to the most gruelling form of physical exertion, a good man of 39 must go down before a good man of 26.

In short, we men of 40 who went to our seats last night with some hope that the young folk were going to be taught a lesson and put in their places, only wasted our time and money.

The vast hall seemed to be crowded. Men who have seen many boxing matches there told me that this was the biggest crowd they had seen for such an event. Debrett and "Who's

Famous Shortstop Who Was Killed By Pitched Ball

Ray Chapman, star shortstop of the Cleveland American League team and reputed one of the greatest players in the game, who died in a New York hospital after he had been struck on the head by a fast inshoot thrown by Pitcher Carl Mays, of the New York American League team. The accident occurred during a game at the Polo Grounds. Chapman's skull was fractured by the force of the blow. He was carried from the field in an unconscious condition, and all available surgical skill was employed to save him. Chapman has been the victim of many accidents during his major league career. In 1916 he broke his leg. This is the first time in the history of professional baseball that a player has been killed by a pitched ball. Chapman was born at McHenry, Ky., on January 15, 1891. He has been a member of the Cleveland team since 1912. He played first professional baseball at Mount Vernon, Ill., in 1908, and the following year he went to Springfield, Ill. From there he went to the Three I League, playing with the Davenport team. He won his first trial with Cleveland in 1911, but was sent to the minors for more seasoning and recalled by the Indians the following year. From that time until his death he was one of the infield stars of the game. His hitting and playing throughout this season was a factor in keeping the Cleveland team in the fight for the pennant. Chapman was married last year to Miss Katherine Daly, of Cleveland, daughter of M. B. Daly, president of the East Ohio Gas Company.

HANKOW BEAT YANGTSZEPOO LAWN BOWLERS

Handicapped At Start By Heavy Green They Finally Win By Ten Points

CAPT. MILLIGAN IS STAR

Visitors Always Better Than Locals And Deserved Their Win

(BY 'SKIP')

The Hankow Interport team scored their first win yesterday when they defeated the Yangtszepoo Bowling Club by 10 points.

It was thought there would be no play owing to the heavy rain in the morning, but rather than disappoint our visitors the Waysider's sportingly opened their green. The going was very heavy at first but the green was drawing well and Hankow made the most of it, although it was thought they would be out of luck as the greens at Hankow are very fast.

THE GAME

Hankow were the first to get away with a single and the homesters replied with ditto, but also added a five at the third. This was mainly due to F. Ferrier, who carried the Jack to his own back woods. Yangtszepoo also added two more singles and at the 5th end stood 8 to 1.

This was rather discouraging for the visitors but nothing loth they came again and secured two pairs bringing the score at the 7th end within three of their opponents score.

By steady play and with the aid of a useful four Hankow passed the locals score at the 12th when the tea interval arrived.

Upon resuming Hankow had things all their own way and scored 13 to Yangtszepoo four, running out winners by 24 points to 14.

Taking the game all through the visitors were always one better than the homesters and thoroughly deserved their win.

Capt. Milligan in particular played a fine game. Skipper Paul as usual gave nothing away and Miller and Godwin were very sound on the Yangtszepoo side all played fairly well but the heavy going seemed to worry them and they could not get into their usual stride.

Spoons were presented to the winners by President B. Anderton at the conclusion of the match who in the course of his speech heartily congratulated the victors. Mr. Burtwell replied on behalf of Hankow and thanked Yangtszepoo Bowling Club for their hospitality and also the spoons, which he assured his hearers would go a long way to convince his friends in Hankow that the team had justified themselves.

The teams and scores were:

Hankow: J. Paul (skip), Capt. Milligan, G. Miller, S. J. Godwin 24.

Yangtszepoo: F. Ferrier (skip), P. H. Robinson, F. Lloyd, J. Wilson 14.

HANKOW v. LAWN BOWLS CLUB

At the Race Course today at 3 o'clock sharp the Hankow Interport team will try conclusions with a selected four from the Lawn Bowls Club.

The teams are:

Hankow: S. J. Godwin (skip), J. Paul, J. W. Burtwell, G. Miller.

Lawn Bowls Club: G. L. Campbell (skip), J. Buckley, T. Harborne, F. L. Marshall.

Gobert And Parke To Play In 1940

An important lawn tennis match has grown out of the big tournament for the world's championship in Great Britain recently. It will be played between Gobert of France and Parke of England in 1940. Yes, 1940.

Andre Gobert and James C. Parke hardly hope to be in the lawn tennis limelight twenty years hence, even though they still expect to give a creditable account of themselves on the court in that distant year.

The important match just arranged will be played not by themselves but by their sons, now three months old each.

EASY FOR RAY AND VARDON

British Golf Pros Defeat Amateurs At Springfield

Springfield, Mass., July 28.—Edward Ray and Harry Vardon, the touring English golf professionals, gave a large gallery of spectators an exhibition of remarkably consistent play in an 18-hole match with Milton B. Reach and J. Toole, local amateurs, on the Springfield Country Club links this afternoon. The professionals won handily by 6 and 5.

Despite the fact that it was his first trip over the links, Ray covered the first nine in 34, equalling the course record, and came back in 37, for a total of 71. The record for the eighteen holes is 69. A little hard luck at the tenth hole, where Ray drove out of bounds, and at the seventeenth, where he put an approach shot into the rough, is all that kept him from breaking this record and taking down the prize of $100 offered for that feat by the club.

Ray's driving was remarkable. On the sixteenth hole, 480 yards, he got in a smashing drive of 290 yards, and then lifted the ball to a blind green on his second shot, just missing a 3 by a hair.

None of Vardon's attempts from the tee were as spectacular as this, but he invariably drove for good distance and his shots were extremely well placed. Both were top notch in putting and also pitched their approach shots skillfully.

Reach and Toole, the local players, seemed somewhat disconcerted by the fact that they were facing such noted opponents and they won only one hole. In several instances they picked the ball up before they had holed, taking an allowed score.

From Springfield the professionals will jump tomorrow to Shuttle Meade, New Britain, where they will play two eighteen-hole matches.

Oxford Man Joins Staff Of University Of Nanking

(China Press Correspondence)

Mr. Searle Bates, who specialised in history and political science on Rhodes scholarship in Oxford University for 3 years, arrived here yesterday. He will be the head of the department of history and political science of the university, and is bringing a large number of books to be added to the University Library in his department.

The new professor is son of President Bates of Hiram College, Ohio, U.S.A. He was in war service with British forces in Mesopotamia for two years.

Dr. A. J. Bowen, President of the University, arrived at Nanking yesterday evening. He was detained at Shanghai for an important business meeting of Methodist Centennial Conference. Mrs. Bowen with her son Philip got to Nanking yesterday morning.

President Bowen addressed the students body this morning in new sage Memorial Chapel, and reported that all Nanking men are doing very excellent work at American colleges.

The University Christian Association will have a reception in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Bowen's return Friday afternoon. Interesting programs including music will be presented.

An advanced course of economies of war has been opened by the University this term. The course is taught by Dean Grey W. Sawis. Over twenty Senior College students attend that class.

Mr. Hwa Peh-hswing, '20 is now lecturing in the districts of the provinces on agriculture for the University College of Agriculture and Forestory extension work. He secured a certificate from the commissioner of industry, enabling him to lecture any government Middle School in Kiangsu. He is very fit for that work, being the prize-winner of the University Chinese Oratorical contest in 1918.

The Philosopherical Club, one of the University Senior College Literary Societies, has been having a very excellent record. Last term, a number of monographs on philosophy and sociology were translated into Chinese, and they have already been published by the Ching Hwa Book Co., Ltd., Shanghai.

AGE HANDICAP TOO HEAVY FOR TOMMY BURNS

Who" had spilled their contents into these crimson seats.

Early in the evening we might have been gathering for a society concert or a charity meeting. They were surely churchwardens who showed people into their seats. One expected the "Old Hundredth" on the organ and an appeal for a bumper collection.

BURNS'S PLUCK

Presently the men who are to conduct the experiment make their appearance, and there are roars of welcome from the eager scientists seated around. They throw off their dressing gowns, and we old men of 40 are beaten already, for young Beckett, aged 26, is a clean cut statue in light bronze, with all his lines sharp and clear, and Burns, aged 39, has a softness and looseness about the waistline that may make for comfort and ease, and good fellowship by the fireside, but is not good in a battle of strength and endurance.

The fight itself is dealt with by an expert colleague on another page. To the non-expert it soon became rather a pathetic spectacle. Burns was full of pluck and skill—to me so unmistakably the superior of his opponent in boxing that ten years ago he might have kept on fighting Becketts all the evening. But years and the flabbiness of age and the lessening of punch and vim as the thirties are left behind will tell their tale.

KEPT GOING BY WILL POWER

Many of us, I think, would have liked the fight stopped at least a round before Burn's folk threw in the white towel of surrender. His right eye was closed, he was reeling from heavy blows to a body that sounded like a slack drum under Beckett's glove, his face was bleeding, and only his wonderful will kept him going.

Twice in the seventh round he was down—twice he got to his feet on the count of nine to take more punishment—and then came merciful surrender.

And with it all I shall remember that for what I regard as real aggressive boxing and enterprise, and the real fighting spirit. Burns, always ready to leap in and take a chance, was better worth watching than the victor, who was always worried lest he should not keep his chin sufficiently tucked away in safety. Burns lost the fight through age—but I should like him to train our present-day boxers.

AMERICAN SONG SERVICE

The Rev. A. E. Claxton will be the speaker at the session of the American Song Service Sunday afternoon at the Masonic Hall at 5 o'clock. His subject will be "Guidance Available for All." A solo will be sung by Mr. A. F. Blanchard and selections will be given by the Song Service Male Quartet.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand's exchange circular for week ending Wednesday, September 15, states:

Exchange.—The London price of silver has again ruled rather unsteady after touching 58½d. it has recovered, on purchases by China, to 60¼d. i.e. ¾d. higher than last week's closing price. Our rate for T.T. on London has followed silver and is quoted officially at 5s. 11½d., one penny up on last week's closing rate. During the last two or three days a premium has been offering of from 2d. to 2½d. over official rates for specified short deliveries.

The Gold Dealers have not operated largely and premiums offered appear to be largely in connection with the arrangement of the general finances of the exchange banks locally. For present requirements there appears to be sufficient funds held in Shanghai, and whatever features may arise to strengthen our exchange, it may be taken that our financial position is very different from that which pertained at this time last year. Including Bar Silver arrived, but not yet landed, we have nearly double the amount of silver held at this time last year, and advices to hand point to considerable regular arrivals during the next two months.

Local stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 32,370,000 a decrease of Tls. 120,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $25,660,000 an increase of $880,000.

Estimated total value in Taels 51,104,000.

Stock of silver on September 17, 1919, Taels 27,500,000.

The Vote In Maine

TO the fevered, shell-shocked peoples of the present day, preparations for the establishment of a real League of Nations appear to move forward but slowly. The pace to us seems snail-like. But posterity's verdict undoubtedly will be that we moved with astonishing rapidity. And when it is taken into consideration that these solid foundations of a real League of Nations to Prevent War—that should be the full title of it, so as to keep the object firmly in the public mind—are being calmly proceeded with in the midst of many minor wars following the Great War—minor explosions following the great one—posterity's verdict will be right. Always provided that we go through with it.

In today's cables is set forth news that the Financial Conference of the League of Nations will be convened at Brussels on Sept. 24, and that the United States, although it is not yet a member of the League, will be represented there along with all the nations that are members and three that but lately were enemy nations. The importance of this conference to the future of the world and to present stabilisation cannot be exaggerated.

Another item of compelling importance is that which relates of the completion of the work of the great international gathering of jurists which has just completed the draft constitution of the Permanent Court of International Justice of the League of Nations. This draft consists of 56 articles intended to straighten out procedure and allay delicate international susceptibilities. IT WAS AGREED UPON AND SIGNED WITHOUT A DISSENTING VOTE! Does this mean anything?

Part of the despatch reads as follows:

"The draft scheme provides that a Judges' Court shall be elected by the Assembly of the League independently from a list of candidates, which will be prepared from 44 national groups of the Permanent Court of Arbitration instituted at the Hague by the Conventions of 1899 and 1907, each group consisting of two candidates. The Court will be composed of 15 members, elected for nine years.

"A concession is, however, made to international susceptibilities by an article giving each party to a dispute the right to have among the judges dealing with the case one judge of his own nationality chosen preferably from the list of candidates. The Court must hold a session once each year, and the President is empowered to call extraordinary sessions if required.

"On the delicate question of the Court's competence, the project says that when a dispute has arisen between States, and it has been found impossible to settle it by diplomatic means, and no agreement has been made to choose another jurisdiction, the party complaining may bring the case before the Court. In the case of States which are members of the League, the Court shall have jurisdiction to determine cases of a legal nature concerning the categories of disputes mentioned in Paragraph two of article thirteen of the Covenant.

"The Court shall also take cognisance of all disputes submitted to it by a convention between the parties.

"The Hague is proposed as the seat of the Court."

So that in the midst of these small wars, complicated by the results of the Great War and by the efforts of the Bolshevists to find out where they are going and by the rest of the world to find out what they are and what they want, steady and sure progress is being made. And those who hasten to pronounce the League of Nations a failure before it has held its first meeting—which is scheduled for next November—will be well advised to bide-a-wee. Let them pause for a moment to consider what the position of the world would be today had not the Council of the League and its other subsidiaries been constantly in session trying to steady things long enough to straighten them out.

The bad news of the day, for those who favor The League of Nations to Prevent War, is that from the well known State of Maine, U.S.A. Maine always goes Republican, but some years it goes more Republican than others and this year it has gone that way most of all. And Reuter's tells us that the League of Nations was made the paramount issue in the campaign there.

Political observers in the United States judge by the percentage by which Maine goes Republican whether the rest of the country is going the same way. If Maine goes slightly Republican in September, it means that the rest of the country is feeling democratic, and if Maine goes largely Republican in September it means that the country is feeling Republicanic. (We once heard of a writer who was fond of using strange, sesquipedalian words; one of his fellow writers dropped into his office suddenly one day and found him consulting a dictionary. "Looking for a big word, Bill?" he asked. "Naw," was the reply. "Got one in my mind, but if it's in the dictionary I'm not going to use it!")

So it would appear, if the political observers are right, that the United States is going to vote against the League of Nations. The people of the United States are against war, yet it would seem from this vote that they are going to vote against the League to Prevent War and stick to the Monroe Doctrine. That Doctrine, they believe, would be imperilled by their entrance into the League. But let us, as Americans, ask them these three questions:

Who is going to make the laws against war, and make the laws for the governance of international trade—The League of Nations or the United States? Or is the United States willing to go into the League of Nations as a partner to help make these laws?

And,

Supposing that the many republics of South and Central America which are entering the League of Nations and taking the binding obligations of membership in it—supposing that something should happen between one of these South or Central American republics and a European power, both being members of the League of Nations! Who is going to settle that dispute—The League of Nations or the United States? And if the South or Central American republic has given its allegiance to the League of Nations, what becomes of the Monroe Doctrine?

And suppose that the United States, not being a member of the League of Nations, should become involved in a dispute with a South or Central American republic which happened to be a member of the League of Nations? Who is going to settle that dispute—the League of Nations or the United States?

The fact is, that if the League of Nations is successfully established—and thirty odd nations already have joined it, and it looks like being a success—the United States will have to join it. We are in the position of having to join it or fight it. And we were its most powerful sponsors!

The people of Maine evidently hadn't looked very deeply into these questions when they voted. But they have another vote coming in November, along with the rest of the United States.

GETTING AT THE TRUTH ON THE ROAD

It seems that in the commercial travelers' profession there is an understanding, as firmly established as an unwritten law and certainly more so than a written one, that a salesman never tells a competitor the name of the next town he is to "make." If one asks another where he goes from here the other names a town where he is pretty likely not to he going. Two good friends of "the road" met up in a town along the Ohio. "Where are you going?" asked one. "Oh, to Indianapolis," grinned the other. "You liar," returned the first, "you know damned well you're going to Indianapolis."

Palestine And The Zionist Problem

Zionism And The Future Of Palestine. By Morris Jastrow, Jr., Ph. D., LL. D., Professor in the University of Pennsylvania. Published by The Macmillan Company, 159 pp.

Zionism is a subject which is now receiving a great deal of attention throughout the world. It has produced a very definite schism among the Jews of America and England; this split was accentuated within the last few days by an official utterance in the form of a resolution passed by the Central Conference of American rabbis, declaring opposition to the establishment of a Jewish State in Palestine and to the idea of creating in Palestine a "homeland" for the Jewish people. The resolution stated that "Israel is not a nation, but a religious community," and that "Palestine is not the homeland for the Jewish people"; that the whole world "ought to be its homeland."

Dr. Morris Jastrow, professor in the University of Pennsylvania, has recently issued a book on Zionism, in which he sets forth religious, economic and political phases of the subject. He attacks vigorously the creation of a Jewish State in Palestine, and sustains his opposition with facts and logic which seem conclusive.

In his chapter on the roots of modern Zionism he ascribes the persistence of the sentiment to the conditions prevailing throughout antiquity, which always interpreted religion in terms of nationality. He contrasts to that view the modern view, which looks upon religion as a concern of the individual. He argues that in antiquity every nation regarded itself as a chosen people, singled out by some deity as its very own. From this point of view religion was necessarily interpreted in terms of the solidarity of the group; only those who were Greeks could worship Greek gods; no one could be a Greek citizen who was not a Greek by descent or had become a Greek by intermarriage. The same was true of the Romans: No one could be a Roman citizen who was not also a worshipper of the Roman gods. He finds that the ancient Hebrews formed no exception to the rule:

They had a national deity, whom they called Yahweh, who was their protector and whose control was limited to the territory which the Hebrews could call their own.

The survival in Judaism of the early conception of religion, which attached it closely to nationalistic limitations, continued through the ages after the dispersion, and is regarded by the writer as the root of modern Zionism. Christianity itself succumbed to the Zionistic ideal of nationalism, becoming the official religion of Rome, linking the State universal with the church universal. Citizenship was limited to an avowal of a certain faith, which excluded the Jews from participation in the political life about them and kept alive the longing, instinctive in humanity, for a place where they could worship as citizens.

The era which followed the divorce between Church and State threw down some of the barriers excluding non-conformists from citizenship, including the Jews. Their political emancipation was followed by an ardent participation in the political life of the countries in which they lived, and as a natural consequence the era of Reformed Judaism set in.

The author maintains that the Zionistic doctrine as part of the religion lost its raison d'etre when the Jews became citizens of the country in which they had settled. The separation of Church and State in countries that had heretofore been Christian was paralleled by the complete divorce between religion and nationality in Reformed Judaism.

Modern Zionism was an outcome of deplorable persecution prevailing in Russia and Rumania, which countries have more than one-half of the fifteen million Jews in the world. It was among the Jews in these lands who had no country that Zionism quickly spread, being promoted by the natural social instinct of man to belong to some country. An anti-Semitic outbreak in Germany and Austria influenced Theodor Herzl to found political Zionism. He believed that the Jews were regarded as a separate entity, not because of their religion but race, and the author maintains that this interpretation played directly into the hands of the anti-Semitic movement. Herzl maintained that by organising a Jewish State the Jews would be in a position to exercise pressure, backed by diplomatic prestige to secure protection of the Jews living outside of the proposed Jewish State.

Dr. Jastrow maintains that the prejudice existing against the Jews is essentially social and not religious. In developing this thought he refers to the fact that hostility to the Jews can be traced back to the days of Pharaoh, before the Jews were a nation, and in Rome, after they had ceased to be a nation. The Egyptians disliked the Jews because they were shepherds. The Romans looked upon both Christians and Jews as radicals, religious Bolsheviki. In fact, Roman writers speak of Jews and Christians as atheists, because they did not believe in Jupiter. He holds that dislike is the outgrowth of difference in habits. He maintains that religious opposition to the Jews did not arise among the Christians until it had become the State religion and the State became intolerant of those who did not accept the State faith.

The Jews ceased to be a nation in the year 135 A. D., when the last semblance of their national independence was destroyed, and they ceased to be a nationality when the movement of immigration from Palestine, which began at the close of the 6th century B. C., left only a small minority in that country. He asserts that nationalistic movements of the 19th century, such as revived the Balkan nationalities, which prompted the union of Italy, which formed the United German Empire, which restored the Polish and Bohemian States furnish no analogy for Zionism None of these nationalities ever ceased to be one as did the Jews The former had remained nationalities despite some immigration from their native lands Zionism, he maintains, arose as an ameliorative measure. It did not arise in Palestine, but outside of it. He draws comparison between Zionists and the Irish, holding that the Irish never ceased to be a nationality, that they remained distinctively Irish; but Palestine ceased to be Jewish a few centuries after the extinction of the national life of the Jews. Today it is predominatingly Arabic.

He holds that Zionism involves a false reading of Jewish history during the past 2,000 years; it rests on a false interpretation. He follows the history of the Jews when their national life ceased in 135 A.D., when the Jews split into two groups, one following the teachings of the Apostles, who gained the world for the new religion, and those who remained a separate group, holding unyielding attachment to the rites and ceremonies of Talmudic Judaism. He argues that had the Jews remained merely a nation they would have disappeared as other nations of antiquity upon the extinction of their national vitality, as the Egyptians, Babylonians, Phoenicians, Moabites, Philistines, the Persians, the Hittites.

He holds that Jews survive today because of the strong bond that was created through their becoming a religious people When a nation, Jewish Palestine never played any notable part either in antiquity or in later days. So long as they enjoyed national independence, he argues they made no contributions in the field of art, science, government or military strategy. Solomon sent to Phoenicia for architects; the temple was patterned after religious structures of Phoenicia and Babylonia. The intellectual activity of the Jews came after their dispersion. Their great philosophers arose in Western Europe, and their eminence in music, in literature and the sciences developed centuries later, following their political emancipation in modern times.

He argues that the intermingling of the Jews with their fellowmen enabled them to render their greatest share of service toward the advancement of culture and civilisation. He believes that the Zionists are exercising every energy to take a step backward when the whole world seems bent on moving forward.

Palestine is today a land filled with sacred association for the followers of three great religions, and cannot be said to belong to particular group. As a worshipping place of Christianity it is as sacred to Christians as to Jews. Mohammed drew his inspiration from the religions that arose in Palestine. The author believes that the holding of Palestine is as vital for the Christians as it is for Jews; Bethlehem, Nazareth, Tiberias and the Jordan are closely associated with events in the life of Jesus. Mohammedans reverse, as do the Jews, the sites associated with the figures of the Old Testament, such as Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, Rachael, David, Solomon, Absalom, Job and the Prophets. Mohammedans and Christians have fought for the possession of the land for centuries; around the sacred spots churches and chapels have been erected by Christians and by Mohammedans.

The Greek Church, the Roman Catholic and the Protestant are very largely represented, and Christian pilgrims from France, Spain and Italy and other countries are constantly passing through the land. Almost every European country is represented by the 150,000 Christians residing there. The Mohammedan population of 500,000 represents all sections of the Islamic world—Egypt, Arabia, Asia Minor, Persia and Turkey. The predominating Arabic speaking population are the direct descendants of those who have been in possession of the soil for many centuries.

Dr. Jastrow maintains that if there is such a thing as a historical claim to the land, the claim of the Mohammedan natives of Palestine rests on as substantial a basis as that of either Jews or Christians, the Jewish population being the smallest of all, estimated at about 80,000.

The writer refers to the animosities which have sprung up among the three classes of the inhabitants of modern Palestine which will flare up anew if an attempt is made to establish there a Jewish State; that a genuine storm may be expected to follow any serious attempt to carry out the political movement of the Zionists. It is against all the trend of the ages.

He argues that it is of little avail to give the assurance that the rights and privileges of the Mohammedans and Christians in Palestine will not be interfered with. There will be a general protest against the principle of placing the control of a country in the hands of any particular group, and particularly a minority. The very implication in the name, "Jewish State," is that the government would be organised on the basis of a single nationality and controlled by the nationality. Even if the State should be organised on the basis of a divorce between religion and the State, by sheer necessity a Jewish State would present the double aspect of religion and nationality, which would mean a step backward.

In his closing chapter Dr. Jastrow discusses the tendency toward a modification of the political program of the Zionists. He asserts that those qualified to speak for Zionists say that there is no intention of asking that Palestine be handed over to the Jews, but that assurances be given of non-interference with the movement of further immigration of Jews to that country and that the status of Jewish colonists be recognised, to which he sees no objection. This view of the author is contradicted by the attitude of the international Zionistic Congress, which now is in session at London. The aim and tendency of the body seems to be toward the founding of a Jewish State. As late as July 9 Dr. Max Nordau strongly advocated there that Great Britain be informed that "Palestine should become a Jewish State." Dr. Jastrow maintains that if a Jewish State were organised in Palestine the other nine-tenths of the Jews of the world, while technically belonging to the Jewish State, could not escape the implication that they form a part of a separate Jewish nationality. This, he maintains, would play directly into the hands of those "who are only too eager to seize upon such a weapon to justify their social prejudice and deepen hostility, fixing indelibly the fact that wherever they reside they would form an alien element in the body politic." He maintains that this step will retard the political emancipation of the Jews everywhere and will create obstacles in the maintenance of full political rights in the new States of Russia, Poland and Rumania.

He suggests the possibility, under the rule of the world by a League of Nations, that the proposed Jewish State may find itself in a quarrel with some other State, and calls attention to the serious attitude in which the Jews of the States involved would be placed. The author maintains that, while no doubt they would give their allegiance to the land where they dwelled, they would nevertheless be under serious suspicion. He foresees another serious difficulty in relations where former residents of Germany, Austria and Turkey would bear in the country which would be placed under a mandatory power of Great Britain.

if a quarrel were to break out between England and Russia while Great Britain held the mandatary over Palestine it might lead to the exclusion of Russian Jews, to whom the Zionistic movement is due. The existence of a tiny Jewish State, representing only one-tenth of the Jews of the world, will complicate instead of solving the Jewish question. In the first place it will arouse the opposition of the natives of Palestine and of the adjoining Syria, who will resent being pushed to the wall; secondly it will create hyphenated Jews all over the world; and thirdly, it will place Jews outside of Palestine in a position that will oblige them in self-defense to present a decided attitude of opposition to their fellows who insist upon their separate nationalism. Political Zionism, instead of serving to unite the Jews, will create further splits of the most serious character, and the upshot of the movement will be to keep alive the spirit of opposition in those lands in which the Jews are treated as aliens without political rights.

The author says the Jewish question is but the struggle to secure for the Jews in all lands the same political rights as their fellow-citizens, and that is the only solution possible. He holds that even if immigration to Palestine could proceed at the average of 25,000 a year, a quarter of a century would elapse before they could become a majority in that country, provided there was no immigration of Mohammedans or Christians and no natural growth

For Anglers

Streamcraft. An Angling Manual. By George Parker Holden. Illustrated. Cincinnati: Stewart and Kidd Company. $2.25.

Speckled Trout. Fishing Lines And Other Verse. By James H. Hoadley. Introduction by Rev. Tertius van Dyke. New York: Theo. E. Schulte.

While these two little books are very different in their contents, the appeal of both will be chiefly to lovers of the angler's art. So vitalised are they both with the fisherman's delight in the sport that either one is enough to enthuse a novice and send him forth in search of a trout brook. And in that case he ought surely to have Dr. Holden's "Streamcraft" in his pocket, for it will tell him a thousand things he will need to know before he can be a successful fisherman. Here he will find a chapter on how to select his rod and how to rig and care for it; another that informs him on the art of casting, with pictures that show him how to hold hand and arm as he grasps the rod and casts the fly; next is a long section on the habits of the trout in various regions and on the lures to which they succumb, and following this is another on angler's flies and how to tie them, with many text illustrations of the stages of the work. Then follow descriptions of typical artificial flies for trout, bass and salmon angling, with eight pages of beautifully colored plates showing nearly 200 specimens. These are indexed and classified according to color. There are many other full-page illustrations including a frontispiece in green tint of "The Beautiful Neversink." While the book is intended as a manual for anglers and will be found very useful by both novices and experts, it is the outcome of such knowledge of the art and such delight in it that it is instinct with the joy of the fisherman from cover to cover.

Nearly all of the verse in Dr. Hoadley's collection of poems sings the praises of fishing and does so with enthusiasm and a real feeling for the lilt of rhymed and metered lines. A few have other themes, one of the best known of these being "The Bobolink," in which occurs this stanza:

I stopped; 'twas the song of a bobolink!
And there, in the city street,
Methought I could smell the clover
And the breath of the meadows sweet.

The author has written a very readable preface in which he holds that "man is by nature a fisherman," discourses interestingly about the different kinds of fishing, tells of the different regions where he has fished, shows how good it is for a man to have a hobby and how good a hobby fishing is, and declares that "no man can be called a true fisherman who does not love fishing far better than he loves fish." "The enthusiastic fly fisherman," he continues, "is not so much after results as he is after the pleasure of casting. His delight is not fish but fishing. He is satisfied to get a few as a result of his skill. His fish may cost him ten dollars apiece—and they often do. He is content because he has got what he went for—the joy of casting, plus all the other great joys from communion with nature in the great fresh, exhilarating out of doors, along the streams and in the woods, among the hills." Tertius van Dyke, in his short "word of anticipation," which introduces the book, confesses that "Being the son of my father I was born, as it were, with a rod in my hand and an irresistible instinct for a stream in my heart."

Palestine And The Zionist Problem

of the present Mohammedan and Christian population in Palestine.

In his summary of the arguments he maintains the following: Immigration of Jews to Palestine can be better accomplished without than with a Jewish State; that the orthodox Jews residing there would resent the establishment of a State unless with a religious background; that the State would represent but a small fraction of the Jewish population; that local autonomy is already established for the Jewish colonists in Palestine. In answer to the argument of a national homeland to develop culture, the author says that the best contributions that the Jews have made to culture have been made under the stimulating contact with others. He closes by urging that Palestine be the one place in the world where all the nations of Europe and America, Asia and Africa could unite in a practical League of Nations; to organise the country on the broadest possible basis.
